

The Janesville Daily Gazette.

VOLUME 25 Entered at the Post Office at Janesville, Wis., as second-class matter. JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1881. Published Every Evening Except Sunday at 10 o'clock. NUMBER 250

It will be remembered for many years to come that plowing was being done in Rock county on the 26th of December 1881.

It is proposed to throw a little humor in the inauguration at Madison next week. They have secured a brass band from Oshkosh.

Even great wealth does not make all Boston women attractive enough for marriage. That city has 103 unmarried ladies, each of whom is worth over a million dollars.

Madame Adeline Patti sang to a twenty thousand dollar house at Cincinnati on Wednesday evening. Annie Louise Cary and Myron H. Whitney also sang solos.

Judge Cox has finally woken up to a sense of his duty and yesterday placed Quintan in the dock, for profane language in court. If Judge Cox had taken this course several weeks ago, his court room would not have been the scene of so many disgraceful and humiliating exhibitions on the part of the assassin.

During the past year there were thirty-seven murders in Chicago, and out of that number not one was hanged, and only one was sentenced for life to the penitentiary. No indictments were returned by the grand jury in six of the murder cases. Five pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to the penitentiary, five others stood trial and were convicted, and six have not yet been brought to trial. In four of the cases the murderers committed suicide. The ten who either pleaded guilty or were tried and convicted were sentenced to terms varying from four years to twenty years. It is said that not a single case was tried and acquitted.

The bills of the physicians and surgeons for attendance upon the late President Garfield, amount to about $68,000. Dr. Agnew's charges are $30,000, Dr. Hamilton's $25,000, Dr. Bliss $8,000, and Dr. Reynolds's $5,000. Barnes and Woodward will, of course, present no bills, as they are surgeons in the United States army. Dr. Agnew's charges are at the rate of $500 a visit. He charged $5,000 for the first operation he performed on the President. Drs. Boynton and Elson, who were with the wounded President almost day and night acting as nurses, have not presented any bills for services. Unquestionably Congress will give them something for their valuable services.

The Wisconsin Senate for the coming session will stand twenty-three Republicans and ten Democrats. Seven of them have had no legislative experience. Baughman has had the longest experience—ten years; Scott has had nine; Van Schaack seven and Richardson six. One-third of the body—eleven—are natives of New York; four are from Vermont; of the six foreign-born, Germany contributes four; only one Senator—Crosby—is a Badger born. The oldest Senator is Chase, of the sixth district, who is 73 years old. The youngest is Crosby, who is 34. Seven of the Senators are lawyers, seven merchants, five interested in lumber and three farmers; one is a banker and another is a miller.

There are no new developments in regard to the contest for the Madison post-office. The State Journal does not discuss the question at all, and the Democrat's latest explosion on the subject is as follows: "Mr. Keyes will no doubt refuse to resign his position as a member elect of the Legislature, and as that is only Howe's excuse for opposing him, it is not probable that he could get the postoffice if he did resign, if Howe and the Wisconsin Senators can prevent it. In the light of all these facts it appears that some other aspirant for that office—one who has been a good ward striker and who had not offended the ancient Timothy might do well to gather an armful of petitions and start for Washington."

Lieutenant D. A. Dorsey, of Jefferson, in this State, is a survivor of a memorable expedition during the late war. He was one of the special detail of twenty-five sent by General O. M. Mitchell from Shelbyville, Tennessee, in 1862, into Georgia, to capture a train on the Memphis and Charleston railway, and escape with it into the Union lines, burning the bridges behind them. Owing to a combination of circumstances, the scheme failed, and the party were obliged to abandon the train and take to the woods. Most of them were captured, and eight were hung. The others after suffering in Rebel prisons, were finally exchanged. Mr. Dorsey goes to Washington in the interest of the survivors, to induce Congress to make an appropriation for a special bounty or pension for the survivors of the thrilling expedition.

The question of ex-President Hayes' wealth has been frequently discussed by the newspapers, some contending that he was almost a millionaire while others argued that he was in moderate circumstances. The latest contribution on the subject is a Cleveland dispatch which says that Mr. J. C. Cover, a member of the Garfield memorial association, called on the ex-President for a subscription of $1,000 to the monument fund. A number of prominent Ohio men had subscribed $1,000 each, and the association was encouraged to believe that a thousand dollars would be given by Mr. Hayes. But Mr. Cover's visit to the ex-President was fruitless. He pleaded poverty, and said his desire to subscribe to the fund was very great, but prudence forbade. He claimed that he had been misrepresented in regard to the savings out of his salary while President, that although he had drawn $200,000, the amount he was able to save was very small. He also claimed that his wheat farm in the Red River country was more of a loss than a profit to him. The general impression is that Mr. Hayes has some large and valuable investments especially in United States bonds. During his term as President he was exceedingly economical in every particular, and some very good authority has it that he saved at least $150,000 of his salary. His Uncle Burdick also left him a large estate from which he has a comfortable income annually. Like Grant, Hayes was never a generous giver, and like him would be apt to plead poverty although his possessions were handsome and his income more than he could judiciously use.

The great agitation in Kansas is the prohibition question, and the leading men on both sides of the issue are filling the newspapers with opinions and statements from which the public is unable to decide what are facts and what are simply reckless assertions. While ex-Governor Robinson, of Kansas, who has been for years and is now a temperance reformer and a teetotaler, says that prohibition is a total failure, a Rev. Mr. Griffin declares that it is a grand success, and claims that any newspaper which will publish statements that the prohibition measure in that State does not prohibit drunkenness, prostitutes its column to a base purpose. It is to be regretted that there are so many contradictory reports about the work of prohibition in Kansas. The public wants to know the facts and should know them, because there is a contest going on in this State and others for prohibitory laws, and the question of success or failure in Kansas of the new measure will have an important bearing upon the question in Wisconsin. The weight of authority seems to be that prohibition is not a success in Kansas, that it does not prohibit the selling of liquors, and that it does not prohibit drunkenness. It is very evident that the law is largely disregarded in that State, for the reason that Governor St. John has issued a proclamation offering a reward for the arrest of persons in several cities named in the proclamation, who are engaged in selling liquor contrary to the prohibitory act. Governor St. John has claimed in speeches and in interviews that the prohibition act was a complete success, but his recent proclamation is a confession that the law is not rigorously enforced. It does not appear to work any better in Kansas than it does in Maine, where people have come to show as much disregard for the famous "Maine law" as the people of Wisconsin do for the anti-treating bill of last winter. A gentleman well known in Janesville because he has lived here many years and occupies a prominent social and business position, went to Maine last summer, and while in Bangor, he inquired in regard to the working of the Maine law about which we hear so much from persons who advocate prohibition. He does not drink himself, but found after diligent inquiry that in Bangor, a place having but 16,000 population, there were about 200 hundred places where intoxicating liquors were sold. About the same report comes from Portland, and in fact from every city in Maine. What is wanted, at least what is needed, is some influence which will work the largest and the most permanent temperance reform. If prohibition does fail to do that as it seems to, let the local option law be put to a more thorough test.

PERSONAL TOPICS.

Mr. Oscar Wilde, an English orator, wants to come to this country and lecture for $200 a night. Mr. Wilde is too wild on his price. America is full of orators who would like to get $200 a night.

Mr. Tilden keeps very much secluded at his Graystone home on the Hudson. He is recuperating for the race of 1884.

Mark Twain generously furnished $300 to W. H. H. Gillette, the author of "Two Professors," to put that play on the road, before its remarkable success in New York.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris will arrive in the United States next week and will spend the winter with her parents in New York.

Miss Arabella Root, of Chicago, composed the memorial march, "Slowly and Sadly," as a tribute to the memory of President Garfield, and Mrs. Garfield has written the young lady a very touching letter in recognition of its composition.

When the new chief justice of Dakota, General Alonzo J. Edgerton, received from Governor Pillsbury, last March, his credentials as a Senator from Minnesota, his eyes grew misty and his voice perceptibly trembled as he said: "Governor, as usual in such times with me, I am totally unable adequately to express my gratefulness for the high trust you repose in me and this distinguished mark of it." "All right, Edgerton," said the Governor, in his hearty, kindly way. "Don't try; that's my plan. Wait until some other time to express your thanks."

DOCKED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 28.—Quintan's abuse reached its culminating point to-day, and even the exceptional leniency of Judge Cox was not proof against it. Day after day since the trial began the foul tongue of the assassin has been allowed to wag with the utmost license, in spite of the protestations of counsel for the government, but to-day the torrent of coarse and blasphemous abuse of the witnesses and the lawyers was so great that Judge Cox's disposition to be lenient was overborne, and, in response to protestations of counsel for the government, Quintan was ordered placed in the prisoners' dock.

The cowardly nature of the assassin as well as his sanity, were fully revealed by this decided act on the part of the court. The fear of being placed in the dock, where he would be as well protected as in the situation he has held since the opening of the trial, took away from him all his bravado, and, in a moment, transformed him into a whining suppliant, begging pity for another chance. Judge Cox, however, having once made up his mind, was proof against Quintan's appeals, and into his proper place in the dock the trembling assassin was sent. This dock is to the rear and the right of where Quintan has been sitting, and next to a large window opening on the street. The fear of Quintan and his counsel is that he may be picked off by some avenger from the street through this window, hence Quintan's craven conduct and the protests of his counsel to-day. As on yesterday, the expert testimony today was in regard to the insanity and the inspiration theory. Three physicians, whose specialty is the treatment of the insane were examined, and all three avowed a positive belief in the sanity of the prisoner. They all believed he had been feigning insanity during the course of the trial. Among the points most damaging to the prisoner were those made by Dr. Chandler, superintendent of the Tennessee insane asylum. He disapproved the idea of hereditary insanity, of moral insanity, or of a moral monstrosity, and toward the close of his direct examination, knocked away the supports of the inspiration theory with the following statement: "An insane delusion controls the person possessing it, and a person possessing it could not talk or act for any great length of time as a sane person. Insane persons betray their condition by their conduct. A man laboring under the delusion that he had been commanded by the Devil to take the life of a fellow man would readily betray his condition." He had noticed the actions of the prisoner while attending court, and thought him a sane man.

WISCONSIN SCHOOLS.

MADISON, Dec. 28.—The annual meeting of city and county school superintendents of the State, about thirty being present, was held in Madison this afternoon. State Superintendent Whitford delivered an address denouncing the present condition of country school houses, and urging superintendents in cities and counties to interest themselves to secure better ventilated and better arranged school rooms.

The committee on proposed legislation recommended a change in the law relating to county superintendents, so that they should be elected for a term of four years; require them to have had at least two years' experience, and to hold as high a certificate as they are authorized to grant. The report is accompanied by a bill embodying the above points, drawn up for introduction in the Legislature.

Superintendent R. W. Burton read a paper favoring a direct State tax for the support of the common schools, to be apportioned as is the school fund income, instead of the present method, under which the schools are dependent upon local authorities, often indifferent to the needs of the schools.

Superintendent J. T. Linn read a paper on the practice of granting certificates without examination, and Superintendent Morgan discussed a proposition to hold the school meetings earlier in the year.

SMALL CRITICISM.

MILWAUKEE, December 28.—Judge Small, before retiring from the bench to-day, reviewed his course as judge of the circuit court during the past twelve years, and improved the opportunity to criticize severely certain members of the bar, who had become inimical to him. The address is characterized as one beneath the dignity of a judge, and a very impolitic one in view of the fact that Judge Small designs practicing law in this circuit. Judge-elect C. A. Hamilton will occupy the bench, commencing with the January term.
